LONG TERM TRANSFORMATION

Project Live – Darryl

Living Independently and Valuing

Empowerment (Project LIVE) is a program designed to work with 41 chronically homeless individuals. These individuals experience severe mental health conditions and chronic substance use. Project LIVE follows the Housing First Model, which focuses on placing clients into immediate housing and providing the support systems needed to sustain stable housing. Clients like Darryl are assisted with ongoing monthly rental payment, utility assistance, food assistance and transportation (bus pass). Home visit supports are also provided to assist residents with their daily activities. Our clients also get assistance with obtaining social security or employment assistance, along with mental health and substance use counseling. As Darryl puts it, “being back stable again gives you a sense of pride, a sense of being a man and being able to face reality again.” Since Project LIVE started, Darryl and many other families have been completely stabilized and are now living independently. Darryl has transitioned into our Workforce Development program to learn new job and employment readiness skills. He has also become a speaker and mentor for clients in both programs and enjoys giving back. ☘

“I really appreciate the donors caring enough to share their finances with St. Patrick Center. I’ve seen the successes in me, so I know they really help people.” DARRYL

Veteran Services – Milano

Former Army Specialist Milano has been a client in both our Supportive Services for Veteran Family program (SSVF) and Homeless Veterans Reintegration Program (HVRP) for over one year now and has worked very hard to get where he is today. Milano came into the program 5 days sober, staying in a shelter and with the deep desiring to become a better provider for his family. Milano showed a deep commitment to the programs at St. Patrick Center, making all his appointments and abiding by all program guidelines. He was quick to admit mistakes, willing to ask for help when needed and always willing to put in the hard work needed to succeed. Through the HVRP, Milano was able to find permanent housing and obtain a stable job. He has since been promoted to General Manager at his current employer, is more than one year sober and is enjoying housing stability. ✕

IMMEDIATE SUPPORT

Women's Night Program – Susan

St. Patrick Center's Women's Night Program (WNP) assists women experiencing homelessness, helping them to overcome barriers to permanent housing. WNP provides case management, individual counseling, treatment planning and emergency shelter for up to 30 women who have behavior health issues and/or substance abuse issues. The women are connected with various agency programs as well as community partners.

Susan was once a client in the WNP, coming to St. Patrick Center after a long, cold month of living on the street. Susan became unhoused through a very unfortunate situation. After escaping an abusive relationship and moving in with her uncle, two years later her uncle passed away. Her nephew took possession of the home and promptly forced Susan out, leaving her on the street with few belongings to her name. Outside in the cold, constantly fearing for her life, Susan fell ill and ended up in the hospital for a week. Once out of the hospital and back on the street, Susan was taken to a women's shelter where she spent a short time before joining the WNP at St. Patrick Center. Susan was only at SPC for a few months before she received a housing voucher and quickly moved into permanent housing. "I knew when I walked into that [first] house it was mine", says Susan. She has now been housed for 7 months and enjoys spending time with her lovely cat Socks. ☘

"I felt they really cared about me, everybody here has been so good to me. Being in an abusive relationship you don't think you deserve that...[but] people actually cared about Suzy."

I am so grateful and thankful, because I wouldn't be here today if it wasn't for St. Patrick Center and the angels that work here." SUSAN

Hospital to Healthy Housing – Ellis

Hospital to Healthy Housing (H2HH) is a resource coordination and temporary housing service program operating in three St. Louis area hospitals, Mercy - St. Louis, Barnes Jewish Hospital and SSM Health St. Louis University Hospital. This program allows St. Patrick Center to place a service coordinator at the hospital to quickly and conveniently access unhoused individuals who are high utilizers of the hospital's emergency department. Jessica Craig, Manager of St. Patrick Center Hospital Programs, is grateful for hospitals inviting St. Patrick Center employees like Emily Corey onsite to meet with patients. "Together we have improved access to housing and created stability to over 100 patients", says Jessica. Emily, St. Patrick Center's Service Coordinator at SLU Hospital, has been working with SSM Health since their partnership with St. Patrick Center began. "Hospital to Healthy Housing is an excellent example of collaborative healthcare," she says. Emily has served many clients during this time, helping to connect them with permanent housing and maintain healthcare stability. Recently, Emily worked with a client named Ellis. Once homeless and a high user of the SSM Health emergency department, Ellis is now in his very own apartment. He worked with Emily for eight months before getting the keys to his new apartment. His goals when the two started working together were: to get his own place, have a source of income and maintain better health - all three goals have been accomplished through the proud partnership St. Patrick Center shares with SSM Health. *

Camp Cole

On August 2nd, 2021, with the help of supporter John Berglund of StarWood Group and the Archdiocese of St. Louis, St. Patrick Center opened St. Louis City's very first intentional unhoused community, Camp Cole. Camp Cole was started in response to an unsafe and unhealthy encampment that existed near St. Patrick Center. Camp Cole provides 40 residents of this encampment the opportunity to have shelter, two daily meals, snacks and even space for entertainment. "I wouldn't want to be in a situation that is unsafe and we never want our clients to be in that situation either, which is why Camp Cole was created as an alternative." Says Anthony D'Agostino, CEO of St. Patrick Center. Camp Cole also provided the residents of this new community access to St. Patrick Center staff to begin exploring permanent housing opportunities, as well as other services offered, such as job training and substance abuse services. Camp Cole has proven to be a successful model for what an intentional unhoused community can look like, being a safer, cleaner and more peaceful place to rest. Camp Cole has allowed St. Patrick Center the opportunity to serve many residents, whom many are now SPC clients and on the journey to stable housing, better health and employment. ✌

"What I love best about St. Patrick Center, is that the staff meets clients where they are and is empathetic to understanding their journey. They listen without judgment and treat everyone with dignity. From preventing evictions and keeping hundreds of families in their homes to working with our unhoused neighbors in need of shelter and meals. This wide span of services is a reflection of all the different levels of support given to St. Patrick Center from the entire St. Louis region. With the community, donors and volunteers investing in our work, we are all building a better place to live and work. Transforming lives and improving our community." BOB OLWIG Board President
